ABOUT THE AUDIO

Throughout this book, there are practice tracks included for selected transcriptions.

When you see this icon:  click it to listen to a practice audio track for that artist's transcription.

The included practice tracks are designed for repeated listening and study, and are taken directly from the video performances. Many are provided at a variety of speeds for intense analysis. Note: not every transcription in this book includes an audio practice track.

Note: You must be connected to the internet in order to view video and audio excerpts.

AUDIO INTERPRETATION and ETUDE 1C.

The Solo Style of Baby Dodds

This etude was inspired by Baby's solo recorded in 1946, which can be found online and on recordings. It is written in the style of Baby's solo, and is my interpretation of what he played. I have indicated some stickings and variations of patterns. Baby uses drums, cowbells, blocks, rims, and springs in his solo. Accents and percussion sounds can be varied according to performance requirements. A key point to note is that his bass drum playing on all four beats is flawless. Try playing an extended solo with the bass drum on all four beats without rushing, dragging, or playing variations: it's really difficult!

The study material is presented here as an "in the style of" drum chart, as though you were playing drums with the band, with some written drum solos. Follow the chart and note the band rhythms, along with Genes's time and fill in the interpretation. At letter E, you'll notice that Gene starts a drum solo, and then stops, letting the piano solo continue. This was a spontaneous movement, illustrating the beauty of jazz, in that it does not have to be perfect, and can be totally of the moment. Continue through the chart to letter H, and you'll find a solo in the style of the first 24 bars of Gene's solo. Continue to listen to the end of the solo (transcribe and learn the rest of the solo, if desired), and note how Gene cues the band at the end of the song (cue: measure 126).

PRACTICE EXERCISES

These exercises are taken from the drum chart and written in the style of the drum solos. The practice tracks are presented at two speeds for study purposes. Note Gene's phrasing, sound, and feel.

An incredible example of Gene Krupa's power, dynamics, musicality, and sense of drama can be found on the Benny Goodman Orchestra's live 1938 recording of the song "Don't Be That Way." Gene plays piano fills that lift the band and the audience to a new level, and you can hear the reaction from the crowd. These examples are written in the style of Gene's dramatic fills. The first example (Ex. 1) occurs after a band figure where Gene plays a 16th-note double-time fill that just explodes! In Ex. 2, the band is playing a typical double-double-plumissimo figure, getting softer and softer, until Gene comes in on the third beat with powerful 16th notes, leading the band to the cry fortissimo finale.

Gene's approach certainly influenced drummers for generations to come. One additional example that illustrates these fills as an influence would be Don Lamond's dramatic fill in the band about chorus of Bobby Darin's 1950s hit "Somewhere Beyond the Sea." When studying Krupa, make sure to note not just his amazing solos but his special time feel, sense of drama, musicality, and amazing fills.

KENNY CLARKE

January 9, 1914 - January 26, 1985

Kenny Clarke is considered one of the great drum innovators who pioneered the transition from swing to be-bop. His distinctive cymbal beat is legendary, and as the house drummer at Minton's Playhouse in the early '40s, he participated in the after-hours sessions that led to the development of modern jazz.

Clarke grew up in Pittsburgh, toured around the Midwest, and moved to New York in 1935. Working with groups led by Edgar Hayes and Lonnie Smith, he began to develop a modern swing cymbal rhythm. This approach also included adding syncopated accents on the bass drum (which was referred to as "dropping bombs"), and allowing the left hand to play more syncopated rhythms. Encouraged by trumpeter Roy Eldridge, Clarke created a series of independence practice exercises including a combination of a rim shot followed by a bass drum accent, which earned him the nickname of "Klook," short for "Klook-mop," an imitation of the rhythm (as the story goes).

Kenny performed at Minton's with Thelonious Monk, Charlie Parker, Dizzy Gillespie, and Don Byas, among others. He joined John Lewis, Ray Brown, and Milt Jackson to form the Modern Jazz Quartet, of which he was a member until 1955. This group combined classical elements with jazz, and was one of the most important jazz groups of all time. Kenny Clarke moved to Paris in 1956, where he found a creative and well-respected living environment. In Paris he performed with Bud Powell. In 1961, he formed the Kenny Clarke-Francy Boland Big Band, which lasted 11 years. It also featured another incredible drummer, Kenny Claire.

VIDEO, PRACTICE EXERCISES, and ETUDES

The video illustrates Clarke's great cymbal beat, comping, and incredible soloing. The practice exercises are written in the style of Kenny's comping, coming out of what seems like a bass solo. The first time etude illustrates Kenny's comping (left hand, cymbal, and bass drum rhythms to accompany the music) and the second Etude is written in the style of the second part of the video, based on his trading choruses in a 12-bar blues. It also includes examples based on his comping between solos.

The second Kenny Clarke video clip is included to further study the playing of this great jazz.

GUS JOHNSON

TIME STUDY

Gus with Basie

GUS JOHNSON

November 13, 1913 - February 6, 2000

Gus Johnson had a long, successful jazz drumming career, but is best known as the swinging drummer with Count Basie's band from 1949 to 1954, playing both with his small group and big band.

Gus Johnson backing up tenor player Illinois Jacquet, early 1980s.

Born in Tyler, Texas, Gus graduated high school in Kansas City, played with Lloyd Hunter and Ernest Redd in the mid-1930s, and then joined Jay McShann's band in 1938, which also included a young Charlie Parker. He left McShann in 1943, entered the Army, and upon his discharge rejoined McShann. Later Gus played with Earl Hines, Cootie Williams, and Eddie "Cleanhead" Vinson.

Joining the Basie band in 1949, Gus added a fluid swing beat, and helped re-establish the Basie band's importance as a major group. He left Basie in 1954 and went on to perform and record with Buck Clayton, Gerry Mulligan, Coleman Hawkins, and Ella Fitzgerald (with whom he played for 9 years).

Gus joined the World's Greatest Jazz Band in 1969, and played with that group until 1974. He lived in Denver in semi-retirement, his last performance taking place in Bern, Switzerland in 1990, with Jay McShann, Ralph Sutton, and Milt Hinton.

VIDEO, and TIME STUDY

This video features Gus with Basie's small group, and the chart illustrates Gus's comping, and the form of the arrangement. Follow along, and please note the way he swings! This is some incredible swing drumming, and his laid-back but grooving feel makes the music work. It's classic playing.

- "Fast with Basie"

May 4, 1926 - January 29, 1979

VIDEO DRUM CHART

This is another drum chart from the Basie band, and it's a fast one! It features a drum part in the style of what you would find in a major band. Please note the figures, and how Sonny interprets the band.
